The Borough Assessors have begun their annual tour.

Sherman's planing mill is turning out thousands of strawberry boxes.

The mason work on the addition to Harkins' Iron Foundry is about completed.

David Leatherbury cut off the tip of one of his fingers while at work at Sherman's planing mill one day last week.

Mr. William H. Grundy, who has been in England and France for several months, returned to Bristol last Sunday.

Mr. William H. White, an old and much esteemed resident of Bristol, died last Sunday morning after a lingering illness.

About thirty men and a dozen horses and carts are at work at the new cemetery, grading and laying out the walks and drives.

On Monday next the Pennsylvania railroad company will commence to run its trains from Broad street station to Fairmount Park.

Still we don't know how the Representative of the Seventh District stands on the Chinese question. Mr. Goddard is recorded as "not voting."

The steamboat Twilight will commence making double trips next Monday, leaving Philadelphia at 7 o'clock A. M. and 3 P. M., and on return trips leaving Bristol at 10 A. M. and 5 P. M.

The water will be shut off on all the street mains above Walnut street, on Sunday, from noon until six o'clock P. M. in order to allow the company to put in a stop valve at the end of the main on Porcane street.

It would not be surprising if quite a number of new houses were erected in Bristol this season. There are but few vacant dwellings now, and when the new mill brings its workmen here the supply will not likely be equal to the demand.

The work on the new mill is to be pushed rapidly forward. On Monday the ground was staked off, and the masons have commenced on the foundations. The contracts for building were given out last Thursday. Jonathan S. Wright takes the mason work and Henry Rue the carpenter work. The window sashes will be furnished by Joseph Sherman.

List of letters remaining in the Bristol post office, Wednesday evening, April 19th—Jacob Cox, Anabella Cox, Clara E. Dixon, Daniel Doogan, E. A. Fitch, Theres Lindquist, Hettie Morgan, Wm. Rose, Mrs. John Showell, Daniel Street, J. L. Walton, Chs. Urak, George Vandine, James B. Vandegrift. Postals John Gallagher, Penn street; John McCloskey.

Captain Cone and several other gentlemen have purchased all the beach between Cape May and Schellenger's Landing, a distance of about three miles, and the railroad, now running from Cape May Point to Cape May, will be extended to the "Landing," in the vicinity of which there is excellent fishing in season and is also a pleasant place to sail. This extension will add greatly to the attractions of Cape May.

The fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Thomas and Mary Daney was celebrated in a quiet way on last Tuesday evening at the house of Charles Killingsworth, on Cedar street, where they now reside. For nearly four-score years the aged couple have lived, fifty years of which have been passed in each other's society as man and wife. They were married in Bristol, England, and the following day set sail for America to seek a home and livelihood here. The friends of the venerable pair spent a pleasant evening with them, and joined in hearty congratulations upon their attainment of the golden anniversary.

The bare announcement that Carnross Minstrels are to appear at Birch's Opera House, is sufficient to ensure a large turnout of Bristol people on that occasion. When in addition it is stated that the programme includes their celebrated Burlesque entitled Her Majesty's Opera, introducing gems from Patience, the great musical success, "Over the Garden Wall," the extravaganza entitled "The Arrival of Patti," and the great hit "Four Wilde Oceans," in addition to other notable features, the probabilities are that the turnout will be greater than ever before. The entertainment will be given on Thursday evening next, and tickets for reserved seats can be had at Callanan's stationery store on Mill street.

The Presbytery of Philadelphia North.

The spring meeting of the Presbytery of Philadelphia North convened in the Presbyterian Church at Doylestown on Tuesday morning, a large number of divines being in attendance. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. D. K. Turner, of Harrisville, the retiring moderator. Rev. J. H. Boggs, of Frankford, was then chosen moderator for the ensuing year. The afternoon session was devoted to routine business. A committee was appointed to examine the sessional records. After the report of the committee on arrangements the clergyman engaged in a free discussion of the state of religion within the bounds of the Presbytery. At the evening session the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, the moderator presiding.

The second day's session was opened yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, when the following delegates to the General Assembly were elected: The Rev. Dr. Knox, of Bristol; Rev. Mr. Mason, of Bridgeport; Rev. Mr. Kirk, of Ashbourne; and Elders Wiggins, Delwiche and Van Hoen. Rev. Henry A. MacKubin was received under the care of the Presbytery, and having sustained the required examinations was licensed. He received and accepted a call from Grace Presbyterian Church at Jenkintown, and arrangements were made for his installation. R. H. Bent underwent preliminary examination, and a call was placed in his hands from the Edgelyll Presbyterian Church. Committees on the various churches then reported. The committee on the state of religion within the bounds of the Presbytery reported a flourishing condition of affairs in both church and Sunday School work. The meeting then adjourned.

The Engle Clock.

The wonderful piece of mechanism known as the "Engle Clock" is now on exhibition at Cabeen's Hall this borough. It will remain during the week and should be seen by every one who delights in the wonderful. From many other equally complimentary notices, we clip the following from the Baltimore Sun.

One of the most remarkable specimens of man's handwork ever exhibited in Baltimore may now be seen at the Masonic Temple. By an exercise of ingenuity of which one can scarcely suppose the human brain capable, Mr. Engle has produced a clock that is truly a thing of beauty and the source of much real delight. By means of intricate and delicately adjusted machinery, forty-six figures appear and disappear with a precision of movement and a uniformity of action that seem more like human beings than mere automata. Our Saviour and the twelve apostles are represented, and close at the heels of Judas Iscariot is constantly seen Beelzebub, with his fiery eyes and forked tail. The three Marys mentioned in the New Testament Scriptures are also prominently shown. A full company of continental soldiers, as flourished in the days of '76, with Molly Pitcher actively in the background, are also seen. Her clock has a pipe organ, and gives out much sacred music that is pleasant to listen to, while the Revolutionary soldiers behind me." The much vaunted Strasburg clock is not to be compared to Engle's.

TRADES UNIONS MAKING LAWS.—At a meeting of the Central Organization of the Trades Unions in New York, a platform was adopted demanding that eight hours shall constitute a day's work, that children under fourteen years of age shall not be engaged in mines, factories or workshops, that all contract labor on Government work and all convict contract labor shall be abolished, that workmen be given a mechanics' lien for all wages on their work, that there shall be equal pay for equal work of both sexes, that Labor Statistic bureaus shall be established by the States as well as General Government, their officers to be chosen from labor organizations, that there shall be sanitary inspection of mines and factories; that the conspiracy and tramp law shall be repealed, and that "a national circulating medium shall be issued to the people without the intervention of banks."

A modern Jonah, whom prosperous communities would do well to avoid, has just shaken the dust of Nevada from his feet. Before starting thence for Oregon he made this concise but comprehensive statement of the ill luck which has hounded him: "I went to Maine and the ice crop failed; I went to Florida and the frost killed all the gardens and orchards; I went to Mississippi and they had a flood; I went to California and the people began to die with smallpox. Since I struck this State the Comstock mines have never paid a dividend, and if I go to Oregon I am willing to bet they will have a drought."

Governor Hoyt has appointed Hon. Charles H. Stinson President Judge of the Thirty-eighth Judicial District, to succeed the late Hon. Henry P. Ross. Mr. Stinson has been a practicing attorney for thirty-three years. In 1868 he was elected on the Republican ticket to the State Senate, where he served until 1870, during which time he was for one session speaker of that body. Mr. Stinson is an able lawyer, and his appointment gives general satisfaction among the Republican members of the bar.

The Mormon leaders, who had been in the habit of having their wives live with them in the same house, have taken the alarm since the passage of the Edmunds Bill and scattered their wives, fearing the operation of the third section of the bill, which makes cohabitation with more than one woman a misdemeanor. President Taylor is reported as having turned out all his wives, on the theory that, if he could not have them all, he would not have any of them.

The new steamboat Wilmington, which will this season ply between Philadelphia and Wilmington, paid Bristol a visit last Sunday. She is a handsome craft and will receive a good share of the traffic between the two cities.

A dispatch to the Philadelphia Press.

states that the will of the late Judge Ross has been admitted to probate. The document is a remarkable and characteristic one. It is in the Judge's own handwriting on small note paper, covering two pages and a half, the last half being written lengthwise across the page.

"I Henry P. Ross," it begins, "late Judge of Montgomery county, Thirty-eighth Judicial District, make this my last will." It revokes a former will, and then directs "that all the accounts of his brother George in the settlement of their father's estate be taken as absolutely correct without further inquiry, as he is the soul of honor and integrity, and I would settle with him myself the same way." He then constitutes his "dear and dear friend," Harman Yerkes, Esq., his "dear and favorite student," his executor, and the trustee of his daughter Ethel by his first wife. He desires her to be educated by her trustee "as I myself was, allowing for make differences," and her trustee to "look after her as if she was his own daughter, and as I would by one of his children if I survive him."

His father's watch he bequeathes to his brother George, and his gold headed cane and "State Trials" to Harman Yerkes, Esq. His residuary legatee of his estate are his wife and her children (Ethel sharing with them).

The will is very characteristic throughout. The testator was a poor financier and his estate will not reach over $25,000.

The second annual meeting of the Women's Silk Culture Association of the United States was held in Philadelphia on Tuesday afternoon. Twenty-two yards of broadened satin intended to be presented to Mrs. Garfield for a dress was exhibited for the first time, and it was stated that it took fifty pounds of cocoons, making fourteen pounds of real silk, to make the dress pattern. Some silk was also exhibited which had been made from cocoons in which the silk worms had fed upon osage orange. This experiment was pronounced a success, as three pounds of osage orange cocoons make one pound of real silk. The annual report which was read by the President stated that sufficient had been accomplished to insure the success of the movement; that silk has been raised in this country equal if not superior to the best of the Italian product, and that the extent of American silk culture was shown by the contributions to the dress of Mrs. Garfield, representing as they do fourteen States.

Darius S. Fisher, of Reading, this State, was taken to the County Insane Asylum on Tuesday. He was a theological student, and in his attempt completely to memorize the Bible his mind gave way. Six years ago he began the study of the Old Testament, and, having a wonderful memory, he made rapid headway. His ability to quote chapter after chapter and book after book was astonishing. In all the six years he applied himself assiduously nearly fifteen hours a day. He fitted up a chapel in the attic of his father's house, and there pursued his studies. The most remarkable stories are told of his accomplishments, and finally, when he imagined he was about mastering the great task, his mind was wrecked, and he became so violent that it was necessary to remove him to a place of safety. Within the past few days he preached to imaginary congregations and led in singing and praying.

Last Monday night John Lennon, a tailor, thirty-five years old, returned to his rooms, No. 406 East Tenth street, New York, after being away from his home since Friday last. After the couple retired to bed Lennon quarreled with his wife and forced her out of bed. She ran to a corner of the room, and then he said, "I have often threatened to cut you to pieces, and now I'll begin." So saying he drew a large pocket knife, and in a few minutes he inflicted several wounds on his wife's body. These wounds were in the left arm, six were in the abdomen, from two of which the entrails protruded, and there were cuts of from 6 to 7 inches on each leg. Mrs. Lennon escaped into the hallway, and while endeavoring to raise the neighbors her brutal husband finished his work by cutting her throat on the right side.

The Ford brothers, it is reported, have been indicted, plead guilty, and were sentenced to be hung, and either have been, or will be, unconditionally pardoned by the governor of Missouri. This seems like expeditious work. The Ford brothers were employed to secure the bandit, James. They did so by shooting him. It was then found to be illegal, and under the statutes, murder. So, to meet the law, the men are indicted, convicted and sentenced, and then pardoned.

Two men were mending a tank in a Louisville oil refinery. A red-hot bolt was dropped into some turpentine which had been carelessly left in the bottom. The interior of the vessel was instantly aflame. The workmen squeezed into the exit hole together. Neither would give way to the other, and both could not pass through at the same time. The consequence was that they were fatally burned.

The Queen imposes a fine of ten oxen and 42 on any person in Madagascar who manufactures alcoholic beverages, and a lighter one on those who sell or drink them. Yet the festive Madagascan, like his brethren in Maine, will have his toddy and takes it "straight." To drink whiskey is the first habit taught him by those who "hark in the blessings of a benign civilization."

Pure alcohol is now prescribed by many physicians in preference to whiskey, wine, beer, &c. To use a standard alcohol is believed to insure an accuracy of treatment which cannot be had with articles which contain the spirit in uncertain quantities. It is thought important not to disguise the taste of the alcohol in any way, in order that the patient may feel that he is taking it as a medicine and not as a beverage.

"Through Siberia" is the title of a work of great importance, soon to be published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. It has already been published in England, where it was received with high favor. The author, Rev. Henry Lansell, undertook, and carried to the end, a task that imposed upon him the severest difficulties and necessitated absolute devotion to his work. He made a journey of 8,000 miles from the Ural Mountains to the Pacific on the Obi, Amur and Ussuri rivers which required the hire of a thousand horses. He visited the hospitals, prisons and mines, lived with the people, and studied the history, geography, natural history, and customs of the country. His account of what he saw and learned gives, therefore, the best of information upon a subject about which comparatively little that is trustworthy has been published.

William Walton has started from Burlington, Ky., upon a tour of the world which he has no idea of completing in eighty days, his object being very different from that of Phineas Fogg. He intends to unfurl in every capital the stars and stripes and to secure the autograph of every ruler who is able to write his own name. "When I have finished my trip," he says, "I shall be the only man who ever went around the world without winking." His eyelids having been blown off by an explosion in a coal mine several years ago, Mr. Walton acknowledges that he is "an eccentric count," and it is not impossible that he will accomplish his purpose, for he is possessed of much money and indefatigable assiduity.

The figures for March show a falling off by one-half in the exportation of breadstuffs as compared with the corresponding month of '81. This is to be attributed to the partial failure of crops last year.

A certain doctor of divinity said every blade of grass was a sermon. The next day he was amusing himself by clipping his lawn, when a parishioner said "That is right, doctor—cut your sermon short."

The Ohio Senate has passed the Smith bill closing all saloons and drinking places on Sunday under heavy penalties and pain of imprisonment. The bill will become a law as soon as the House concurs in a few trifling amendments.

A correspondent of the New York Evangelist discovers that "in a quiet way, after the manner of that of the ocean, the tide of feeling in the Presbyterian Church in favor of a liturgy is steadily rising. It is of little use trying to push it back."

"I'm so glad to meet you here, Captain Spinks" and so glad you're going to take dinner. (Captain S. is dejected.) "You are about the only man in the room my husband isn't likely to be jealous of." (Captain Spinks' delight is no longer unshared.)

An addition to the constitution of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which was made in 1892, before the Board of Directors making it obligatory upon every professor in that institution on a full salary to devote two months of the yearly vacation to home missionary work unless specially exempted by the Board.

"You can't add different things together," said an Austin school teacher. "If you add a sheep and a cow together, it does not make two sheep or two cows." A little boy the son of an avenue milkman, held up his hand, and said "That may be with sheep and cows, but if you add a quart of milk and a quart of water, it makes two quarts of milk. I've seen it tried."—Tampa Significance.

Ernest Longfellow, son of the poet, has a card that, inasmuch as many persons have made him the subject of biographies of Henry W. Longfellow, with claims of authorship from his family, he desires to disabuse the public of wrong expectations and guard against imperfect biographies. In due time a memoir will be published, to which the family will lend all their assistance, that for this they reserve all the material in their hands and that they will be thankful to those of Mr. Longfellow's friends who will entrust to them for their use whatever correspondence or other helpful data may be in their possession.

Yalefield had a grant tancy and curiosity to know the history of things about the White House, and as there was no tradition concerning an alabaster clock, narrated by a statuette of the nurse of his father, in this case silent as to her own, a clock which had ticked in the White House time out of mind, he set Secretary Blaine to rummaging through the ancient documents of the White House. The search was amply rewarded, disclosing as it did that the time piece, one of the most famous in Washington, was a present from Bonaparte to Lafayette, who gave it in turn to Washington, and decreed that it should be handed down to his successors in the Presidential office.

The least kind of disrespect or even levity in any matter relating to the czar will put an American country in a passion. An innocent purchaser was once torn to pieces at a photograph stall in Moscow, because some of the country folk saw him tear by accident a picture of the czar, and took it into their heads that he meant it as an insult. It is perfectly true that they are very ready to grumble what peasantry is not? But the grievance is always laid at the door of the nearest market official, and the fixed idea remains that if only the Father of his people knew the truth about all this he would set it right.

Yale, Texas, is one of the most interesting towns in the world. The inhabitants consist of Indians, Mexicans, and forty white men and sixteen white women. There are half and quarter-breed Indians and half and quarter-breed Mexicans, and the women are from perfect daisies down to the real hard cases. There are a few white men here who have married into both Indian and Mexican families, who are rich and are around at their leisure, drink their B.B. wine and eat grapes and figs, and are in cultivation or subject to cultivation by irrigation. The Rio Grande river is one mile wide at this place. There are all kinds of summer, fall and winter peaches, apples and apricots. The houses are built of adobe, nicely plastered, and are as comfortable as brick houses. The town is as quiet and peaceable as any place anywhere.

Mrs. Donough's husband left her in Providence, and went fortune-hunting in California, four years ago. He sent her money occasionally, and now, having accumulated $30,000, has returned to his old home. But he finds that his wife married Thomas Froelick in 1879, and has since had two pairs of twins. Froelick says that she told him that she was a widow, and he is willing now to give her up. Mrs. Donough doesn't want her, under the circumstances. Thus, from having two husbands, she drops to none at all.

"LIVE AND LEARN"—It is estimated that there are over two thousand million chickens hatched in the United States every year. But not more than half of these chicks reach the size of a hen. A prominent ex-Confederate officer, says the Washington Star, started out the other evening to find a man servant. He met a pretty good looking colored man, and asked if he could recommend a good servant. The colored man regretted that he could not.

"What are you engaged at?" asked the ex-Confederate. "Why can't I employ you?" "I am not doing anything just now," was the reply, "but I expect to have a seat in Congress in a few days. My name is Lynch, and I am contesting the seat of General Claiborne."

H. H. Warner & Co. Sarsaparilla—Your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has cured me of indigestion, dyspepsia and kidney affection with which I have been troubled for four or five years. JOHN D. FOSTER.

Henry Greenhouse, a young man of Lebanon, Ohio, heard a convert to Methodism, and believed he had a call to preach. His ambition was encouraged by his pastor, who recommended a course of study. The cost of this preparation for the ministry was beyond his means, and in order to raise the money he engaged two spiritual mediums to give an exhibition under his management. No objection was made by his advisers, as he was careful to advertise that he did not believe in the genuineness of the manifestations which might occur. Still, he seems to have privately had faith in them. While the show was in progress he asked one of the professionally entranced mediums if he would be successful as a minister. She replied that he would succeed for a while, but would eventually die of consumption, and in actual poverty. He went home and shot himself.

The London Lancet says "Nervous diseases and weakness increase in a country as the population comes to live on the flesh of the warm-blooded animals. This is adequately directed, 'Meat'—saying that in its popular sense—is highly stimulating, and supplies proportionally more exciting than actually nourishing nutriment to the nervous system. The meat eater lives at high pressure, and is, or ought to be, a peculiarly active organism, like a predatory animal, always on the alert, walking rapidly, and consuming large quantities of oxygen. In practice we find that the meat eater does not live up to the level of his food, and as a consequence he cannot or does not take in enough oxygen to satisfy the exigencies of his mode of life. Thereupon follow many, if not most, of the ills to which highly civilized and luxurious meat-eating classes are liable."

SOMNAMBULISM.—A Philadelphia detective accused the father and mother of a boy who was employed in a dry goods store of purchasing $65.87, which the boy had collected and taken home with him in the evening, and which next morning he could not find under the carpet, where he had placed it. The father paid the money, but the next night, hearing a noise in his son's room, he went in and found the boy with a roll of bills in his hand, which proved to be the exact amount of the stolen money. The boy was a somnambulist, and, perhaps, while dreaming of duty, when he stole the money from his father's pocket, he was in his room, and removing the money from beneath the carpet, carried it up stairs and placed it beneath the matting of his bedroom.

Miss Sarah N. Randolph, a great-granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson, is now the head of the Patapsco Institute, at Elkton City, Md. Writing to Congressman Manning respecting the proposed monument to Jefferson, she says "The little great tree square is all of the ten acres and acres of land owned by Jefferson when he entered public life which is now left in the possession of his descendants. He sleeps, amid scenes of surpassing beauty and grandeur, on that lovely mountain side, surrounded by the graves of his children and grandchildren to the fifth generation."

Nels F. Brown was to lecture at Mount Pleasant, Pa. One of her posters was stuck on a bill-board belonging to Morrison Brothers, jewelers. They sought out Miss Brown at her hotel, and called her a soundly trespasser. She went weeping to Chairman Hitchman of the lecture committee, and the Morrison went to "Squire Stanfield for a warrant to arrest her. All of which, incidentally, was reported in the local papers, and the audience for Miss Brown, while it advertised the Morrisons more extensively than they could possibly have done it on the billboard.

The introduction of attractive reading matter in the Boston public schools is reported by Superintendent Seaver to have been a practical success. Two kinds of books are used—those containing information collateral to the regular studies and those calculated to cultivate a taste for good literature. Mr. Seaver says "It is delightful, too, to hear the easy, natural and animated tones the children use when reading under the stimulus of freshly awakened interest, but admirable above all is the skill of the teacher who can steadily use this stimulus so that easy and natural utterance in reading becomes, in time, a fixed habit with the children."

BRING OUT THEIR OWN NOSES.—The Postmaster General upon the report of a special agent yesterday abolished the Post Office at Broadway, Rockingham county, Va. The residents of that place not liking the politics (Readjuster) of the Postmaster took their mail matter to the train instead of the Post Office. As the salary of the Postmaster depended upon the number of the canceled stamps their treatment soon reduced the salary to nothing. The department has abolished the office until the people are willing to use it again for mailing their letters and not before.

In unanimously rejecting, on Monday, the amendment which the Senate added to the Post Office Appropriation bill, restoring the franking privilege to Congressmen, the House has shown wisdom and firmness. Before so decided an opposition the Senate will undoubtedly give way. It could not endure the odium of defeating an important appropriation bill in the struggle to get a perquisite for its members.

The letters of Benjamin Constant to Madame Recamier, which have just been published in Paris, are full of a frantic sentimentality. This man, approaching fifty, wrote to the spirituelle lady that he had been "crying all night" because she did not care for him, career, ambition, study, intellect, diversion, all have disappeared. I am no longer anything more than a poor creature who loves you."

The Russian novelist, Tolstoi, has lately written a story so pathetic that he read it aloud to some friends he himself shed scalding tears. Count Tolstoi is one of the most conscientious of authors. A census is shortly to be taken in Moscow, and he has thought this so good an opportunity for studying those parts of the town where misery has made itself a home that he has secured for himself the office of census taker.
